

Esther, Ryan & Amber are BUILDING TOMORROW®

...you can, too!

It wasn't easy deciding on the perfect gift for you to thank you (webale nyo!) for joining us today... so we thought we'd go a different route by making a donation in your honor to an organization that is very close to our hearts: Building Tomorrow (BT).

BT is an int'l social-profit organization, based in Indianapolis, that empowers young people to raise awareness and fund the construction of primary schools in sub-Saharan Africa. In January 2009, Amber had the opportunity to visit Uganda and help construct the BT Academy of Kiyamba, supported by none-other than Butler University. Last summer, Amber interned with BT and helped develop and launch a comprehensive K-12 service-learning campaign: Sit for Good. And along the way, Ryan became a pretty big fan of BT, too.

Our hope today, is that each of you will start Building Tomorrow, too. Here are a few ideas:

(visit www.buildingtomorrow.org for more)

- 1 donate BT's ability to do what they do relies on the support of people like you (buildingtomorrow.org/donate)
- 2 start a chapter 100% of the money students raise goes directly towards project costs in Uganda
- 3 volunteer help out at an event, around the office or both! there's always work to be done at BT
- 4 spread the word tweet, post, blog, facebook, email, bookmark, speak, present, write, ... about BT
- 5 attend an event there's always something going on in indy, from an auction to a golf tournament
- 6 intern a great way to gain real-world experience, work on meaningful projects & have a blast at the same time
- 7 sit for good great for teachers interested in giving their students a more global perspective (sitforgood.org)
- 8 bike to uganda a crazy, one-of-a-kind event, pitting man vs. distance (biketouganda.org)

p.s. Esther (pictured) is one of 1,500+ students learning inside a BT classroom, today. A number BT will double by year's end.
